Print Your Heart Out This Semester

The spring semester comes with a renewed print quota.

It's a new semester, which means that you have a fresh $63 printing allotment on your Pitt ID. Unused quota from last semester doesn't roll over, unless you paid for extra printing. In that case, any funds that you added but didn't use will stay in your account.

To make the most of your quota, print in black and white when you can, and go double-sided to use fewer sheets. Black-and-white printing is only $0.07 per sheet, while color printing is $0.49 per sheet. It's unlikely that you'll run out, but plan wisely if you make frequent trips to the Pitt Print stations. ## SERVICE SPOTLIGHT

Keep Your Devices Secure with LastPass

With the holidays and a new textbook season, you probably created tons of new online accounts or signed up for free trial periods. Who has time to make and remember unique passwords for all of them? Beware! The more times you use the same login info, the riskier it gets—and logging in with your Facebook account just makes it WAY riskier.

Don't let security fall by the wayside! Use Pitt Password Manager (LastPass) to keep your info organized. With LastPass, you only have to remember one master password to access your vault of logins. It's simpler than remembering a million passwords, and you can rest easy knowing they're locked up safely. Start using LastPass to secure your accounts...
